For Joint Defence

Representatives of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan and of some of the mid-Western states of the American union who met recently in Regina to urge the construction of an inland highway on the eastern side of the Rockies to provide a new means of communication between the United States and Alaska appear to have some very potent arguments in support of their contention.

Briefly, the organization that was set up decided to make representations to Washington and Ottawa that the road should be built via this route rather than along the Pacific Coast, as recommended by the Alaska International Highway Commission. The latter had just then requested Secretary of State Cordell Hull for an appropriation of $25,000,000 for the construction of the highway along the Pacific Coast, a distance of 1,600 miles, "as a precaution against invasion by Russia from Siberia."

Just how serious a menace Russia or Japan may be to Alaska is difficult to say, but invasion of this far flung territory of the U.S.A. by either power, or both combined is by no means beyond the bounds of possibility. It is not surprising that the Alaskans, separated from Siberia by a strip of water only 50 miles wide should be uneasy in the light of the recent understanding between Japan and Russia. It is the role of the Japanese, as Hitler's partner in the Orient, to make things as uncomfortable and difficult as possible for the United States and to hamper American aid to Britain by any device that may seem good as opportunity arises.

If a large part of the American navy were withdrawn to the Atlantic it might provide just the opening that Japan apparently seeks to keep the American Pacific fleet busy while the Russians, using Siberian bases invaded Alaska and in so doing constitute a menace not only to Alaska but to contiguous Canadian territory.

Have Strong Arguments

That is just the kind of game that Hitler would like to see played in the Northern Pacific and it would be in keeping with his tactics to induce the Japanese to represent the situation as affording a golden opportunity to the cunning Stalin—a repudiation of the Finnish and Polish adventures with a chance to get something for very little effort.

Because of the geographic and strategic location of Alaska, the question is one of almost as great import to Canada as to the United States, and in view of the defensive reciprocity set up by the two countries for the safeguarding of this continent from anti-democratic foes, it is a subject in which Canada has a vital interest. If it can be shown that a highway which should be built as a defence measure should cross the continent to Alaska on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains instead of along the Pacific coast, Canadians are warranted in taking more than an academic interest in the matter.

A highway route to Alaska from the industrial section of the United States centering on Chicago, where munitions are manufactured in volume would follow a general northwesterly course across the prairies, via the Yukon paralleling the new international airways route, if directions, shortest distance and minimum of cost are important factors and surely, whether the route is to be used for military or commercial purposes, or both, these are considerations of maximum import.

When these considerations are added the fact that such a route would be a protected route as compared with a comparatively vulnerable route along the Pacific coast, the western Americans and Canadians who are urging the adoption of this course would appear to have irrefutable arguments in support of their contention.

Shortest And Cheapest

There is no gainsaying the fact that a highway across the prairies would be less costly to construct and to maintain than one that follows the difficult terrain on the Western side of the Rockies. The fact that such a route would be less accessible to enemy damage than the western route cannot be denied. It could not be reached at all by naval action and would be less subject to aerial bombardment than a coastal highway. Indeed, it could be better protected from attack from the skies since it would be easily protected by Canadian and American aircraft, with early completion of the airfields now under construction along the companion route.

Military action nowadays demands speed. Direct, easily traversable routes coupled with the shortest possible distance means speed of movement. When these things are combined with economy of cost, there seems to be little left unsaid in support of the request that earnest consideration be given by the authorities of the two countries for construction of the direct highway.

It is better to be an inspiring listener than a tiresome conversationalist.

What Anzacs Think Of Italian Troops And Their Fighting

Australian troops seem to take an "unholy pleasure" out of fighting and after their experiences in the Balkans do not fear the military forces of Germany, Robert Menzies, Australian prime minister, said recently.

As for the Italians, Mr. Menzies said he could not repeat in mixed company exactly what the Anzacs think of them and their fighting qualities.

Depend On Hearing

Psychologists Test Ability Of Blind To Avoid Obstacles

Cornell psychologists stated that they had found the solution of what constitutes the so-called "sixth sense" in the blind which enables them to avoid obstacles. The blind avoid obstacles through the sense of hearing, according to the psychologists.

It is believed that the discovery will not only bring hope and confidence to the newly blind, but also will provide techniques for those who have been blind for many years and enable them to obtain a freedom of movement now denied them. The Cornell findings are said by the scientists to have implications also for persons moving about during blackouts, which already have resulted in many accidents in England. As a result of the new findings, those blinded by accidents, or by war, need not resign themselves to utter dependence upon their sighted neighbors, the psychologists say.

In a series of carefully controlled experiments consisting of more than 1,500 trials, the three psychologists used four subjects, two totally blind and two with normal vision. The latter became beforehand that they would be incapable of perceiving the presence of objects without vision. But, from the very outset, these subjects, who were now completely blindfolded, were able to detect the presence of an artificial wall which was placed in their path.

In the first series the subjects were disoriented and started at varying distances from a stationary wall toward the wall, stop as soon as they "felt" its presence, and then to move as close to the wall as possible without running into it. The ratio of the distance to the distance when the subject was as close as he thought possible, was established by the investigators as a measurement of the acuity of the sense of obstacles. The greater the ratio, the greater the acuity.

The ratios of the blind subjects were greater than those of the blindfolded, normal subjects. When the subjects walked on a carpet, without their shoes, the ratios dropped proportionately in all cases.

The blind subjects could detect the presence of the wall, on the average, when it was fifteen feet away and could walk up within three inches of it. The sighted individuals, when blindfolded, detected the presence of the obstacle when five feet away, on the average, and walked within six inches of it. In several series of 50 trials both the blind and sighted persons obtained perfect scores in avoiding the obstacle.

How The Panic-Stricken Poles Are Driven From Their Homes

Nazis are driving panic-stricken Poles from their homes in Polish territories now incorporated in the German Reich. The deportations affect all districts, all classes of people. In the districts of Gostynin and Kutno small landowners have been expropriated, landless peasants driven out. Five hundred persons, Polish business men and merchants, were expropriated in Kutno in one night. Children were separated from their parents and taken into the Reich. Throughout the most severe part of last winter, deportation from the Pomorze provinces of Lodz and Poznan continued. From the small district of Kosciany, 800 peasants were taken to the General Government in cattle trucks. Their journey to Zamose lasted five weeks during which they received no cooked food and remained endless periods at wayside stations where 40 children died.

Out of one single transport of 1,200 Poles from the west to Piotrkow, 229 children died, besides several adults. Only 17 children survived the journey.

New Idea In Banking

Two Memphis banks came up with a new wrinkle—curb service banking for busy motorists. They announced plans for construction of "outdoor windows" to which motorists could drive up, hand their deposit over to a teller and drive away without getting out of their automobiles.

British Girls Man Guns

Are To Go Into Action Under Active Service Conditions

A. T. S. girls are to go into action as A.A. gunners at gun posts throughout Great Britain. They will take their place under active service conditions in the day and night Battle of Britain.

Picked girls will direct the firing and they will share with men gunners the hardships of gun post life and the dangers of bombing and machine gunning.

Sir Frederick Pile, chief of the A.A. Command, has taken this decision after consultation with the War Office and A. T. S. chiefs.

The girls will be trained as A.A. specialists in height-finding and predictor work. Quick thinking, a cool head, and an intimate knowledge of Britain's new anti-aircraft devices are required.

Actual shell-loading and heavy manual work will continue to be carried out by men, but women will direct them.

These women brain-behind-the-guns will receive danger-money and higher rates of pay than rank-and-file A. T. S.

They will have the privilege of wearing white lanyards over their right shoulders and Royal Artillery badges on their breast to distinguish them as A.A. girls.

This is the first step to include women in the country's fighting forces.

SELECTED RECIPES

PEACH CRISP PUDDING

- 2 cups dried dried peaches
- 2 cups water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup 1/4-inch toasted bread cubes
- 2 cups corn flakes

Soak peaches in boiling water 10 minutes. Drain; add water and sugar; cook covered for 30 minutes. Remove from heat and add honey; stir until well mixed. Cream butter and sugar thoroughly; add eggs and beat well. Stir in spices, flavoring bread cubes and Kellogg corn flakes. Place one-half of mixture in buttered baking pan. Spread peaches evenly over top; cover with remaining creamed mixture. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 25 minutes.

Yield: Eight servings (9 x 9 inch pan).

LUNCHEON ASPARAGUS

Cook asparagus in the usual way, drain and while still hot arrange 3 or 4 stalks on heated Holland rusk. Pour over a generous amount of melted butter. Carefully place on top of each stalk a small egg. Sprinkle with a little minced parsley and garnish with two strips crisp cooked bacon.

Always Wanted World Power

New Book Tells Desire Of German Leaders For Generations

Critics of Sir Robert Vansittart, author of the broadcasts and the book detailing Germany's black record of aggression, will sit up and take notice when they see a new book on Germany for which Sir Robert is to write the introduction. The book is an anthology of German political thought from Frederick the Great to the present, and it will show how a continuous desire for world domination has possessed German leaders for generations.

As Sir Robert Vansittart is Chief Diplomatic Adviser to the Government, some of his critics tried to get his book banned by pointing out that the author is a public servant. Lord Cranborne, in the House of Lords recently, said that Sir Robert was entitled to his own opinions, and revealed that Lord Halifax had approved the broadcasts on which the book was based. Sir Robert himself made no public reply to his critics.

Holds Awards For Gallantry

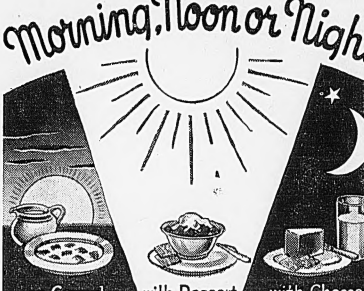

Viscount Gort Won All Three Open To Army Officers

Viscount Gort, who has been placed in charge of the British at Gibraltar, won the Military Cross, the Distinguished Service Order with two bars and the Victoria Cross, the three awards for gallantry open to army officers. The Victoria Cross was earned in Belgium in the great German drive of March, 1918. Then, as now, a man of great physical strength, Lord Gort swam a canal five times bearing with him on each trip a wounded Tommy.

Bombing Berlin

Germans Are Sensitive To Attacks On Their Capital

It has not escaped notice that the Germans are peculiarly sensitive to attacks on their capital. They make more fuss when the Unter den Linden is hit than when the shipyards at Kiel are smashed up by bombs. In the latter case they do not talk nonsense about reprisals—the giving of buffet for buffet is in the obvious routine of war. But they become hysterical with threats and indignation when bombs fall in Berlin. Is it because they fear the damage done to their morale more even than damage to their equipment? If so morale becomes very like a military objective.—London Spectator.

Sir Patrick Duff, after inspecting Canadian troops in England, is quoted as saying, "They strike me as wonderful fighting men." In due time, they will strike the Nazis as the same.

The term "Christian" was first used at Antioch, Syria. The word "Bible" was derived from Byblos, Phoenician port before 3000 B.C., through paper exported from there.

Greater Efficiency

Modern Electric Power Plant Burns Much Less Coal

Twenty years ago a power plant burned three to five pounds of coal to generate a kilowatt of electricity. To-day, so great has been the improvement in the efficiency of both steam and electric power equipment, a modern plant consumes only a single pound of coal per kilowatt of power output. If your power plant is old, the improvement possible is worth investigating.—The Rotarian.

CHAPTER IX.

Devona had no idea how long she had been sitting there, face pressed against the cool iron balustrade, cheeks fanned by the warm, fragrant breeze just stirring from the garden below, the dream in her heart matching the beauty of the star-spangled night. Then, as if he'd stepped right out of that dream, Dale had come striding across the empty patio below.

Devona recognized him instantly, even in the shadow. No one else walked with that same, long, even stride. Smiling, she felt the breath stop in her throat.

Dale stood for a moment beside the black, shimmering pool. Then slowly he turned back toward the house, hands thrust deep into his coat pockets. He stood watching the lighted windows below. If only he'd look up, she dreamed on, still not really believing she wouldn't wake up soon. Look up and speak to her.

As if he'd heard her thought, Dale did glance up, take a step nearer. Then he grinned, waved at her.

"Hello, there, Juliet on your balcony," he called in a husky stage whisper. "You are Juliet, aren't you? Or am I seeing things?"

"Laughing softly, she nodded. "And thou, dear Romeo. Who let you in?"

"I scaled your wall, fair lady, just for a glimpse of thee."

"Then thou must beware my vengeful kinsmen," she said, not realizing how nearly she spoke the truth.

Dale nodded, glanced toward the lighted windows below. "It's much too swell an evening to stay inside. And perfect for a swim. Look, why don't you slide into a suit and come on down?"

Devona hesitated. It was pretty late. Still—why not? I'll be with you in a minute."

It was only a minute before she slipped out of her room, fingers still fumbling as she stuffed her soft hair under a bathing cap. At the head of the stairs she hesitated. Below, in the main hall, she could hear Vana bidding her guests good night. Better use the servants' stairway at the back. It would spare any painful encounter with Vana. And she couldn't bear any more of that. Not to-night, anyway. Not with Dale waiting.

Fleeing, light-footed, along the narrow hall behind the kitchen and servants' quarters, Devona came, unexpectedly, face to face with Wong. A very jaunty Wong in bright-striped sport coat and rakish Panama. Obviously startled to meet her, he hid surprise almost instantly behind a bobbing little bow, pulled off the Panama.

"Yes, miss. Was there anything for you, miss?"

"No, thank you Wong." Again that strange feeling of repulsion. Instinctively, Devona pulled her bathing cap closer and hurried past him.

The water, cool and invigorating, slapped against the tiled sides of the pool as they swam.

A little later they hoisted themselves to the pool's edge, sat dripping, gasping for breath, laughing about nothing in particular, except that laughing together was fun.

The dry desert air was like a warm shawl, and as they relaxed and sat smoking and talking, Devona caught herself crossing her fingers lest anything should break the spell.

"It's glorious out here," Dale said once, stretching his long body luxuriously on the soft grass, so that he lay looking up at the star-studded sky. "You'd never think anything could go wrong in a world that looked as perfect as this."

"Does it? Go wrong for you, I mean?" Devona asked, curled in the lawn swing so that she could watch his face in the moonlight and keep her own safely hidden by shadow.

"Sure. Often." He laughed—a short, bitter little sound. "Plenty wrong."

"I don't know why. If I did, it might help." He scowled at the stars. "All just when I think things are all set for a magnificent showdown something goes haywire."

"A showdown?" puzzled, Devona echoed.

"Yes. A raid. I mean. I know these boys are putting the stuff through. And I get everything lined up for the night they are expecting a big shipment, and then—" he snapped his fingers—"it blows up. Somebody's on to every move I make and I'll be damned if I can catch up with him."

Dale ran strong fingers through his hair, curling damply now and making him look as he must have when he was a sturdy 10-year-old. Devona thought, smiling.

"It's been uncanny!" he went on, savagely. "Like having some mind reader tell you what you're thinking right while you're thinking it. If I could just plug up this leak—"

Now his moment of seriousness exchanged for his usual good-humored teasing. "Look here, why do I always unload my grief on you when—" ever after, and all that stuff."

"Of course. Don't you?"

He shrugged, half serious, half in fun. "Once upon a time I did. Then I grew up to be an attorney and found out people never do anything just for love."

"Oh, but they do!" Devona protested. "Love—"

"Makes the world go round," he interrupted. "Sure, I heard that once too. But I got over it. It's money, my sweet, that makes everything go. Money and more money. And the sooner you learn that in this cock-eyed world—" he shrugged, and the gesture included the patio, the rambling stucco hacienda, even the whole glorious night—"the better off you'll be. Everybody has his price, I've found."

"That's not so!" Flushed, she tried to defend her most cherished ideal.

Dale laughed again. "You'll learn, little Miss Innocence. I'm warning you. Put your romantic notions in cold storage. They won't stand much daylight."

Little Miss Innocence. Devona realized what he really was telling her. She'd worn her heart in plain sight—and of course he'd seen it, felt sorry for her, and her "romantic notions. He knew she'd fallen head over heels at first sight, and gentleman that he was, he didn't want her to make a fool of herself.

Something hard and painful thrust itself into her throat, cut off anything she might have thought to say to hide the awful hurt of his rebuff.

So the silence hung, painfully, for a moment. Then Dale turned toward her again.

"S'matter? Did I hurt your feelings?"

"Of course not, silly. I—I was just trying to decide whether to take one more plunge before I go in," she fabricated quickly, faked a smile.

"Good idea. Come on," and pulled her up after him.

They swam again, up and down the shimmering pool. But somehow, the water was colder now, the glay camaraderie gone, and they climbed out of the water.

"You're shivering," Dale said, and flung her cape around her shoulders.

"Better run in before you catch your death of cold. These desert nights are treacherous."

Devona nodded. It wasn't the cold night, however, that chilled her.

Then, as they ran, hand in hand, across the grass, the sound of a voice from the balcony off Devona's room.

"Devona! Come in at once, please."

Stunned, Devona watched her mother disappear from the balcony.

What had she done, what could she have done that Vana's very voice hated her this way?

"Excuse me, won't you?" she whispered to Dale, fighting to keep her teeth from chattering. "I'll have to hurry."

"Of course." But he kept her hand in his a moment. "See you in the morning?"

"Yes. Good night," and then she fled across the lawn, into the house.

Wong waited until she was out of his sight. Then, as she hesitated at the back door, he heard the soft shuffle of his steps along the balcony.

ever I get a chance at your ear?"

Then, impudently, he pulled aside a wet curl, dugged at the lobe of her ear. "Pretty one it is, too."

Devona ducked away from him. "And what big eyes you have, Grand-ma," she mocked, laughing.

"All the better to see you with," he finished, catching her hands, pulling her down onto the soft grass beside him. "Sing for me, why don't you? One of those little sentimental yrics you are wasting on that gang in there to-night."

Devona shook her head. "Certainly not. Especially when you call it sappy sentiment. Those were nice, sincere love songs, and—"

Dale laughed, a glorious, heart-warming sound that reached right to the depths of her heart and tipped it over. "I bet you really believe in love, don't you? And living happily

"Of course." But he kept her hand in his a moment. "See you in the morning?"

"Yes. Good night," and then she fled across the lawn, into the house.

Wong waited until she was out of his sight. Then, as she hesitated at the back door, he heard the soft shuffle of his steps along the balcony.

ever I get a chance at your ear?"

Then, impudently, he pulled aside a wet curl, dugged at the lobe of her ear. "Pretty one it is, too."

Devona ducked away from him. "And what big eyes you have, Grand-ma," she mocked, laughing.

"All the better to see you with," he finished, catching her hands, pulling her down onto the soft grass beside him. "Sing for me, why don't you? One of those little sentimental yrics you are wasting on that gang in there to-night."

Devona shook her head. "Certainly not. Especially when you call it sappy sentiment. Those were nice, sincere love songs, and—"

Dale laughed, a glorious, heart-warming sound that reached right to the depths of her heart and tipped it over. "I bet you really believe in love, don't you? And living happily after, and all that stuff."

"Of course. Don't you?"

He shrugged, half serious, half in fun. "Once upon a time I did. Then I grew up to be an attorney and found out people never do anything just for love."

"Oh, but they do!" Devona protested. "Love—"

"Makes the world go round," he interrupted. "Sure, I heard that once too. But I got over it. It's money, my sweet, that makes everything go. Money and more money. And the sooner you learn that in this cock-eyed world—" he shrugged, and the gesture included the patio, the rambling stucco hacienda, even the whole glorious night—"the better off you'll be. Everybody has his price, I've found."

"That's not so!" Flushed, she tried to defend her most cherished ideal.

Dale laughed again. "You'll learn, little Miss Innocence. I'm warning you. Put your romantic notions in cold storage. They won't stand much daylight."

Little Miss Innocence. Devona realized what he really was telling her. She'd worn her heart in plain sight—and of course he'd seen it, felt sorry for her, and her "romantic notions. He knew she'd fallen head over heels at first sight, and gentleman that he was, he didn't want her to make a fool of herself.

Something hard and painful thrust itself into her throat, cut off anything she might have thought to say to hide the awful hurt of his rebuff.

So the silence hung, painfully, for a moment. Then Dale turned toward her again.

"S'matter? Did I hurt your feelings?"

"Of course not, silly. I—I was just trying to decide whether to take one more plunge before I go in," she fabricated quickly, faked a smile.

"Good idea. Come on," and pulled her up after him.

They swam again, up and down the shimmering pool. But somehow, the water was colder now, the glay camaraderie gone, and they climbed out of the water.

"You're shivering," Dale said, and flung her cape around her shoulders.

"Better run in before you catch your death of cold. These desert nights are treacherous."

Devona nodded. It wasn't the cold night, however, that chilled her.

Then, as they ran, hand in hand, across the grass, the sound of a voice from the balcony off Devona's room.

"Devona! Come in at once, please."

Stunned, Devona watched her mother disappear from the balcony.

What had she done, what could she have done that Vana's very voice hated her this way?

"Excuse me, won't you?" she whispered to Dale, fighting to keep her teeth from chattering. "I'll have to hurry."

"Of course." But he kept her hand in his a moment. "See you in the morning?"

"Yes. Good night," and then she fled across the lawn, into the house.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE FOR YOU

Victory is the high purpose of our free country. Victory must be won before we can have peace. Nothing short of victory will save to us our freedom. No matter how long and rough the road, we must toil and fight until we win and our homes are safe again.

Behind our men of the Navy, the Army and the Air Force, must be mustered our full economic strength, our industrial strength, our production, the labour of our people and the money that is needed.

This war is far more costly in money than any war ever waged. We must back those who offer even life itself with everything we can put behind them. We must provide them with all the weight of arms they need to outfight and overwhelm the enemy.

To doubt our strength to meet the great calls made upon us would be to reflect on the national character and to belie the tradition, the courage and the self confidence of the Canadian people.

Hon. J.L. Ilsley
Minister of Finance

Mr. and Mrs. Gus. Cook and family, of Hanna, were Chinook visitors on Wednesday.

Owing to the continued wet weather it was decided by the Sports committee to change the date from the 4th to next Wednesday, June 11th, for Chinook's Sports Day.

R.v. Mr. Smith Chinook's first United Church minister arrived here on Thursday to visit with old friends. Mr. Smith is living in Veteran.

Mr. D. McMillon was a week end visitor last week.

Word war received today that Mr. W. Taitt, of Cereal, died suddenly from a heart attack, on Wednesday night. Funeral services will be held in Cereal on Saturday.

The Chinook girls Soft Ball Team played at Alsask Sask., on Wednesday bringing home with them first prize.

Mrs. E. Isbister is an Oyen visitor this week.

"GOD BLESS OUR BRAVE DADDY OVERSEAS"

FOR EVERY CANADIAN who sails the deep, for every airman who flashes through the skies, and for every other man in the fighting forces, the prayers of the nation "rise like a fountain, night and day."

In times of crisis our people stand steadfast. In daily devotions they renew the flame of faith and arm with unseen powers their warriors in the field.

Oftentimes they discern the Unseen Hand. Witness the miracle of Dunkirk. Witness, too, in the darkest hours the emergence of great inspiring figures to steady the ranks of Democracy and fire its courage and confidence.

Church bells are ringing throughout Canada calling men and women to worship and sacrifice in defence of our freedom, the sanctity of our homes and the future of our children.

Translate your faith into works by buying Victory Bonds.

STEP UP
STEP OUT
and
IN A UNIFORM

Be a Man Among Men!

You'll feel like a million dollars the minute you step out in that fine new uniform now ready for you. You'll be a man among men, a vital cog in Canada's great mobile war machine. You are needed to handle guns, tanks, armoured cars and other motorized equipment. Canada is waiting for YOU to spark them to victory. Canada wants ACTION. You want ACTION. This is your chance to get it.

The Canadian Active Army requires men for Artillery, Engineers, Signals, Armoured Cars, Tanks, Infantry, Transport and Supply, Medical and Ordnance and other branches of the Service. The Army is prepared to teach many trades and to train you to efficiently handle Canada's weapons of war.

Go to your nearest District Recruiting Office. Find out about these Units; how they work, what they do. See just where you'll fit in. See where any particular skill you possess can best be utilized. Then join up for ACTION!

RATES OF PAY IN THE RANKS

$1.30 per Day with Board, Lodging, Clothing, Medical and Dental care provided. EXTRA: (1) Rates varying from 25¢ to 75¢ per day for skilled tradesmen while employed. (2) Dependent Allowances in Cash: $35 to wife, $12 each per month for 2 children—only 3 dependents per soldier.

The UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PLAN

To the Employer...

Contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Fund become payable as from July 1st, 1941.

Contributions are made by the employer and the employee, and are paid by the purchase of Unemployment Insurance stamps by the employer from the Post Offices.

The employee's contributions are deducted from his wages by the employer.

Stamps will be affixed to a special book, called the Insurance Book, by the employer. The book is the employee's record of contributions, and when he becomes unemployed it forms the record from which insurance benefits may be paid. Full details will be sent to you when you have returned the postcard attached to a form which is now in the mails.

The plan of procedure has been adopted after consultation with employer and employee associations and is one which has been based upon thirty years' experience in Great Britain.

The Dominion Government adds 20% to the combined employee-employer contributions, and in addition, pays the administration costs which include the operation of a National Employment Service for the convenience of employers and employees.

Contributions are payable by all persons while in employment and by their employers, with the exceptions listed in the panel below.

The first duty of every employer will be to REGISTER WITH THE COMMISSION by completing the postcard attached to a form which is now in the mails, and obtaining and issuing insurance books for all his employees. If there is doubt as to whether your employees, or any of them, are insurable, ask for instructions when you return the postal card. If you do not receive a form through the mail go to the nearest Post Office and ask for one. All employers must complete registration prior to June 14th, 1941.

The Commission feels that it can be assured of the full cooperation of all employers. Nevertheless, attention is drawn to the fact that registration is compulsory and any failure to register is an infraction of the law and is subject to penalties.
